HCG, FSH, LH, P4, P, and E2 in the serum of patients with different causes of infertility.

Method: Extraction and analysis of amino acid and organic acid in follicular fluid.

Results: The amino acid and organic acid concentrations in the follicular fluid were abnormal compared to the control group.

Conclusion: The abnormal amino acid and organic acid concentrations in the follicular fluid may be related to infertility.

References:

